

ACCUSED OF BEATING CHILD WITH A BOARD STUDDED WITH NAILS

Mrs. Becker, Who Fleed When
Girl Was Taken to Hospital,
Arraigned in Court.

Accused of having assaulted an eight-year-old girl with a board in which nails had been driven, a woman who said she is Mrs. Annie Becker, thirty-one years old, of No. 233 East Eighty-first street, was arraigned in Harlem Court today on a warrant issued by Magistrate O'Connor. She was well dressed and wore a breastpin set with several diamonds.

The woman was arrested on the complaint of August Mosopp, an agent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, and was locked up in the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street station.

The child assaulted is described as Beanie Osmars, now an inmate of a charitable institution. According to the police, the little girl, shortly after the death of her mother, was left in the care of the woman.

It is alleged Mrs. Becker beat her with a nail-studded board on June 1. The girl was taken to Harlem Hospital and was a patient for several days until her torn flesh was healed.

On the day on which the assault is alleged to have occurred, the police say, Mrs. Becker left the apartment then occupied by her in No. 230 East One Hundred and Twenty-fourth street and did not return. The child was taken in charge by officers of the Children's Society on her release from the hospital.

Detectives Lawrence and Collins learned last night a woman was arranging for the removal of Mrs. Becker's household furnishings to her new home. They then discovered Mrs. Becker's whereabouts and arrested her.

MAD PARK ELEPHANT IS SAFELY HOBBOLED BY TWO LITTLE MEN

Only 200 Pounds Against
8,595, but Keeper's African Training Tells.

Gunda, the big elephant with the wicked little red eyes, met his match in the Bronx Zoo yesterday in two little men, whose combined weight is less than two hundred pounds. Gunda tips the scales at 8,595.

Since his recent attack on Walter Thurman, his keeper and only friend, Gunda has wandered about a steel cage, now and then charging it with such fury that he threatened to break it down.

"I am afraid we will have to kill him," said Director Hornaday Tuesday night. "He is a menace to the park in his bad humor."

"If you'll give me permission I'll tie him up," said Dick Richards, who weighs just 850 pounds less than the elephant, and for whom Gunda has a most cordial hatred.

"Let me help to tie the thing," spoke up Mathias Walter, a man about Richards' size, who arrived in New York two weeks ago from Africa. "I will do it as I was taught. Only Richards must be with me. This is a secret I don't want to give to the public."

"Go as far as you like," agreed Hornaday, "but you do so at your own risk." Day had just dawned yesterday when Richards and Walter came to the side of the steel cage. They arranged a chain loop on the floor. Then Richards spoke roughly to Gunda. The elephant trumpeted and charged toward the bars. He stepped in the loop and one foreleg was caught. While he was fighting to free himself, the jungle man got chain loops about both his hind legs. At 6:30 the mad brute was in shackles that he must wear forever.

All day Gunda strained at the chains and trumpeted so furiously that his cries were heard through the park. He feared that he might break loose. Mr. Hornaday ordered that the elephant house be closed for the day.

SIDEWALK CAUSES A WAR.

Grace Heine and Barnes Figure in Neighborhood Quarrel.

Heirs of William R. Grace, former Mayor of New York, are in a fight over the building of a much needed sidewalk on the Middle Neck road, at Great Neck, L. I. The owner of adjoining property says the plan will take away his lands.

The objector is David Barnes. The Grace heirs, who own the land across the street, say they have maps that show the sidewalk should be laid as planned by the engineer and that Mr. Barnes claims entirely too much land. It is the sidewalk built as Mr. Barnes wants it that the road will be made dangerous by being too narrow, the Grace heirs assert. But Mr. Barnes says they are wrong and a long legal fight is expected.

Sayings of Famous Men.
(From the Chicago Tribune.)
Gen. Beauregard: "Why didn't you call me, Early."
Ex-President: "Yes, I did it, and I don't care who knows it!"
Andrew Jackson: "I know I'll die some day, but I'll never turn to Clay."
Robert Bonner: "Don't keep a diary, young man; keep a ledger. That's how I got rich."
Balaam: "Now you're talking."
Bryant Young: "Pretty maiden, are there any more at home like you?"
Job: "Doctor, isn't there something the matter with my blood?"

TREW CABBAGES AT HEAD OF STATUE OF GEORGE WASHINGTON

Woman Creates Scene at Williamsburg Bridge Plaza and Resists Policeman.

A stout middle-aged woman attracted a great crowd early today by pelting the equestrian statue of George Washington on the Williamsburg bridge with cabbages and then striving to climb up on the statue and attack it with her umbrella.

The woman had carried a basket containing ten cabbages to the statue, and throwing the basket over the fence that ran off the little plot of ground about the figure, she picked up her skirts and vaulted over after the basket.

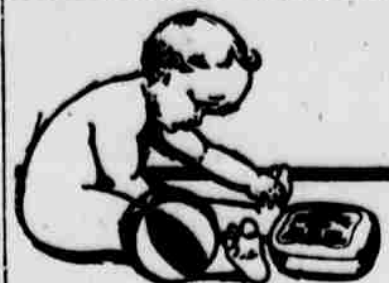

One by one the woman picked her cabbages out of the basket and hurled them up at the Father of His Country. Before she had cast the tenth cabbage at the statue an immense crowd had gathered to watch the bombardment.

By the time Patrolman O'Keefe of the Bedford avenue station had forced his way through the crowd the woman was climbing up the pedestal of the statue and slamming at the head of George Washington's horse with her umbrella.

O'Keefe climbed over the fence and urged the woman to come down. She came down by jumping on O'Keefe's head and then giving battle with insane fury.

O'Keefe was having a terrible time of it when three bridge policemen came to his rescue. The woman was taken to the Bedford Avenue station and later to the Manhattan Avenue Court. All the prisoner would say about herself was that she was Margaret Reggio and that she didn't believe in George Washington. She was committed to the Psychopathic ward of the Kings County Hospital.

For summer skin-troubles

If baby is suffering with summer eczema, heat rash, chafing, insect bites or other distressing hot weather skin-irritation, give him a bath with and put on a little Resinol Ointment. The itching and smarting stop at once and, under this soothing treatment, the trouble soon disappears.

Resinol Soap

After that, a daily bath with Resinol Soap is usually enough to keep baby's delicate and sensitive skin clear and healthy.
